Sneaker Brands Making Moves

MSCHF

Known for its out-of-the-box designs, the success of the very viral Big Red Boots pushed MSCHF to 240% growth on StockX.

Asics

Asics saw hockey stick growth last year – sneaker trades increased 239%, and the brand moved from the No. 10 top-traded sneaker brand in 2022 to No. 5 in a single year.

Oakley

Oakley is having another moment, and not just for its sunglasses. The California-based

Oakley

Oakley is having another moment, and not just for its sunglasses. The California-based brand saw sneaker trades increase an impressive 157% on StockX last year. Favorites include the 90s-era Factory Team sub-line and a collaboration with Brain Dead.

Other top movers: Mihara Yasuhiro (No. 1, 1,502%); On Running (No. 2, 695%)

*Percentages reflect a brand's year-over-year trade growth on StockX, 2023 vs. 2022.

*Only brands with at least 250 trades in 2022 were considered.

Shoes

Ugg (No. 1) and Crocs (No. 2) maintained their positions on StockX's list of top-traded shoe brands, while Birkenstock moved up one spot to No. 3.

Shoe Brands Making Moves

Ugg

Ugg is both the No. 1 top-traded and the No. 1 fastest-growing brand in StockX's 'shoes' category – an achievement no other brand can claim in 2023. In addition to seeing record trades, Ugg closed the year with 154% growth over 2022.

Gucci

With more consumers traveling in 2023, Gucci (No. 2 fastest-growing shoe brand) saw trades jump 85% thanks to demand for sandals and pool slides.

Crocs

Crocs (No. 4) could do no wrong in 2023 – the brand achieved 51% growth, thanks to highly successful collabs that ran the gamut from food to film.

Other top movers: Birkenstock (No. 3, 70%); Polo Ralph Lauren (No. 5, 36%)

*Percentages reflect a brand's year-over-year trade growth on StockX, 2023 vs. 2022.

Only brands with at least 100 trades in 2022 were considered.

Apparel Brands Making Moves

Arc'teryx

Arc'teryx (No. 3 fastest-growing apparel brand) achieved 186% growth year-over-year, proving that outdoor performance wear has cemented its place in hype culture.

Represent & Corteiz

UK-born streetwear brand Represent (No. 2) saw impressive gains, growing 361%. Corteiz – another UK native – narrowly missed the top five fastest-growing rankings, landing at No. 6 with 113% trade growth year-over-year.

Stüssy

Though it didn't rank among the top five fastest-growing apparel brands, streetwear staple Stüssy made one of the biggest jumps on the list, moving from No. 22 in 2022 to the No. 11 top-traded apparel brand in 2023.

Other top movers: Denim Tears (No. 1, 694%);
Drake (No. 4, 160%); Sp5der (No. 5, 145%)

Accessories Brands Making Moves

Jacquemus

Jacquemus – which offers luxury at a more accessible price point compared to other French fashion labels – saw trades surge by 111%, making it the No. 3 fastest-growing accessories brand on StockX in 2023.

Coach

Coach (No. 4) saw trades tick up 77%, fueled almost entirely by demand for the Swinger 20 Bag in Cherry Print. Based on a 1980s archival Coach design, the bag quickly sold out online and continues to trade for a premium on StockX.

Louis Vuitton

LV moved up one spot to rank among the top five best-selling accessories brands on StockX in 2023. With Pharrell's appointment, the brand is poised for a new chapter in 2024.

Other top movers: Oakley (No. 1, 268%); Jordan (No. 2, 199%); Corteiz (No. 5, 68%)

A Look Ahead: 2024

Bid Adieu to Boring

Sneaker brands played it safe in 2023, with classic retro models and neutral colorways dominating the release cycle. We're predicting a resurgence of out-of-the-box designs in the new year. Think vibrant prints and pony hair, head-turning styles like the Martine Rose Nike Shox MR4 Mule, and more first-of-their-kind silhouettes like Cactus Plant Flea Market's futuristic Air Flea 2.

Hardwood Hits

Performance basketball has been on a hot streak with Kevin Durant's KD line, Ja Morant's Ja 1 shoes, and LaMelo Ball's MB.01 all performing well throughout 2023. But the category got its biggest boost late in the year with the relaunch of the Kobe line. Other hot entrants – including Anthony Edwards' AE 1, Devin Booker's first signature shoe, and a rumored release from Jerry Lorenzo – have us excited for the new year.

What's Old is New

From Supreme x Corteiz to Pharrell Williams' new chapter at Louis Vuitton, the most attractive team-ups in 2024 may be those that mix old and new. Heritage streetwear brands like Supreme and Stüssy remain ever-popular on the resale market, but newcomers also flourished in 2023 – the fastest-growing apparel brands on StockX are younger labels like Denim Tears (+694%), Represent (+361%), Sp5der (+145%), and Corteiz (+113%). Is uniting the old guard and the new the secret to success?

Y2K Runners Aren't Going Anywhere

Retro-inspired runners had a breakout year in 2023, and demand isn't slowing this year. Running shoes have made their way into mainstream sneaker culture, with brands like Asics and New Balance leading the charge. Many of the year's fastest-growing sneaker silhouettes – the Asics Gel-1130 and Gel Kayano 14, New Balance's 530, and Nike's Zoom Vomero 5 – have running roots. We expect to see even more demand for these mesh upper styles in 2024.

Investing in Luxury

Value was top-of-mind for shoppers in 2023, and that won't change in the new year. Consumers will continue to think about price and value, and future investment potential will play a bigger role in purchasing decisions. On StockX, Louis Vuitton Bumbags and Goyard totes are some of the products showing consistent price appreciation.

Leaning Into Loafers

Consumers will continue to diversify their closets in 2024, which we expect will mean even more growth for StockX's shoe category. Sneakers aren't going away, but more and more consumers are embracing a pre-pandemic formal aesthetic, and brands are delivering. Dr. Martens and Supreme teamed up for a loafer collaboration that helped Dr. Martens see a 33% spike in trades on StockX in 2023. Today's loafers aren't office-bound – they look just as good paired with faded jeans as they do with tailored trousers.
